

NO ONE
STOPS
US
THINKING!

UNLOCKING LOCKDOWN!

2021 may have started with restrictions
But we carried on writing with conviction!

BRENDAN

I walked heavily down the water-filled lane. Many puddles were reflecting the dark, dusty trees. When out of the blue, a herd of sheep came galloping past me. "Go on! Move along!" cried the sheepowner. I stopped further into the bramble without saying "Shall I stop?" I asked with a tremble in my voice. "No-nah!" she smiled. "They go in this field." Poking my head over a small, crumbling wall, I could see old, dusty mines set with hidden features covered by trees. I knowingly turned my head to see the sheep, now calmly grazing. I hopped from one leg to another to avoid the prickly brambles. It was starting to get dark, so I only went a bit further. "Ow!" I cried as I stubbed my toe on a brown box. What was in there? cautiously, I opened the heavy lid to reveal lots of soaking wet gears! The gears were as old as rusty metal coins. My before dinner walk had turned into a mysterious adventure.....

HARRIET

OLIVIA'S ENDING - BUT WHAT WAS THE STORY BEFORE?

With it coming closer and closer Mya stood there wondering what to do, BANG!! It echoed down the valley. What could be out here at this time? Then suddenly a silhouette ran across and turned off all the yard lights. Mya crept out of the room with hair brushing her feet in the gentle breeze. She stopped in horror as her feet couldn't carry her any further, out of the blue a mysterious figure tapped her on her shoulder and whispered some words ending with 'This isn't over yet!'

HARRIET'S THINKING
BIG HERE

Cosmic by Frank Cottrell Boyce

Somehow, I had won the competition. Now I was checking the instrument panel. We were all worried about take-off: in our spacesuits and seatbelts, it was far from an ordinary journey. 20.....19.....18. Crushing, compressing, punching. Our faces wouldn't work, our arms wouldn't work, we were trapped. A few minutes of panic, then a reassuring voice spoke in my ear. Mr Digby we have a glitch, then release from the protective shield hasn't worked. Can you locate the orbit button? I didn't mention something had gone wrong. I didn't mention how proud I was that I was going to fix it. Neither the training nor the first flight had prepared me for the first incident. All we had to do was press the buttons in the right order. The voice in my ear switched green, red, yellow. The earth had vanished. The buttons had been pressed in the wrong order. With a violent shake the solar suits had opened unexpectedly. That made a loud screaming noise and immediately picked up a gust of solar wind. The control panel's message was PERMANENT FATAL ERROR. There was a hatch that led to the orbit module. We all crowded through gazing for at the sight of the moon. At that moment, my mind flashed back to the preparations we had made before the journey. Our experience of the g-force machine; packing our bags; waving goodbye to our parents. I looked out. There were the stars. There was no point in trying to describe them, it would be like describing the molecule of oxygen your breathing. There are too many of them, I felt so small. What if stars are really small, what if there are just stars visibly making what if there are just stars. Dad's name flashed up on my panel. I can pick you up if you like. I'm oh I'll walk home. My experience of gaming got me dashed back onto the main module. Walking back into the main module, the others followed. Pressing a button I could see that we had been jettisoned and we were now orbiting the earth, hoping to return to it one day.

ELEANOR'S CATS HAD
SOMETHING TO SAY ABOUT IT!

Debate Writing

Parent: "Right 10 minutes before you have to go to bed and that is final!" Said the parent pointing at me.

Me: "Well if I stay up later I can finish doing my homework and study more whilst having a film on in the background," I replied.

Parent: "I see your point but still, are you actually going to do your homework?" The parent questioned me.

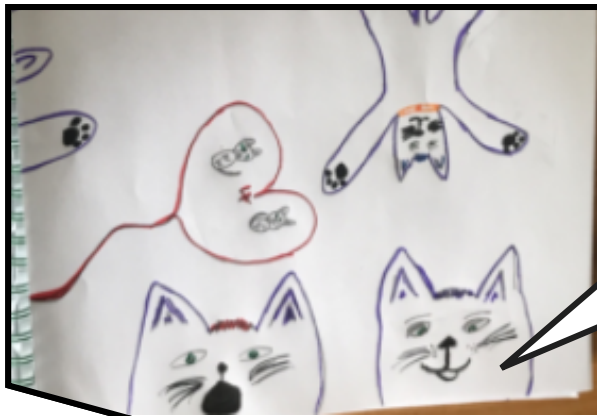

Me: "Yes of course I will, And the film could even have educational," I told the parent.

Parent: "Of course it isn't give me one good reason why it is," She said smugly.

Me: "Well I can learn Ninja skills to defend myself and I am still going to do my homework too," I replied.

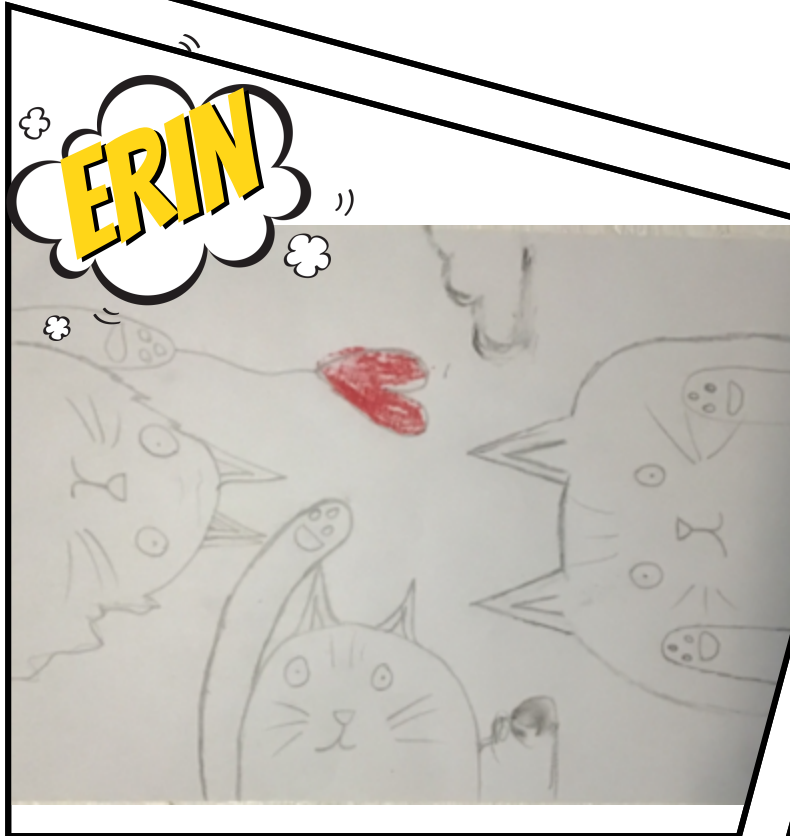

Parent: "Ok I guess then. You've won this time, but now me, your going to bed," She said sighing that I had a good reason and I was correct.

DON'T ARGUE WITH ROSIE!

CAJA'S CRAZY CAT

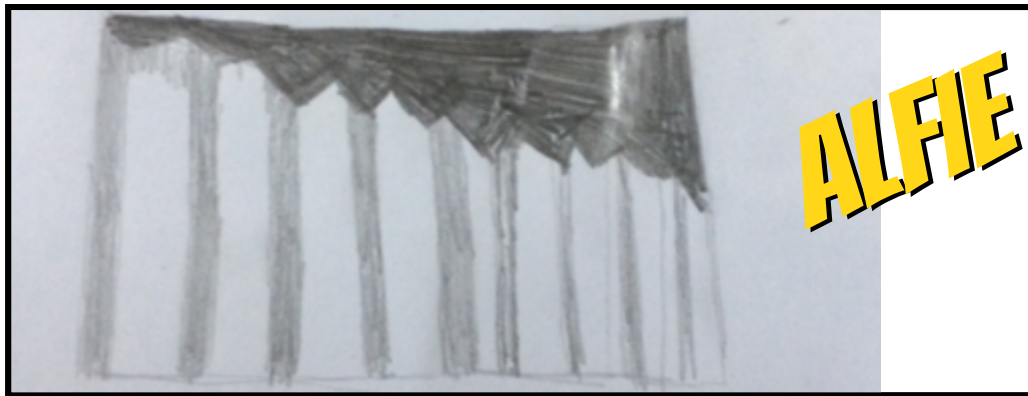

I'M GLAD
KATIE MADE
US LESS
CRAZY!

ERIN

EMILY

| |
|---|
| The rocket blasted off |
| Sending the astronauts into space to create a massive spark |
| The rocket blasted off |
| Unknown nebula of peacock blue lights |
| Always leaving a metallic purple mark |
| Its always dark |
| The rocket blasted off |

POW
FROM
ELEANOR

Trees moved in the night
they gave us a big fright
trees moved in the night
as they headed for a fight.
It was just past midnight
as they caught their flight.
Trees moved in the night

Mars is red like a ball of fire .
Mars is red because it Extremely higher,
It burns like the sun,
But it isn't hot,
It looks like a lovely spot.
But I certainly am happy keeping my feet on this planet and watch how Mars is red from afar.

EMILY

CHLOE
AMAZING!

zoom!

BRENDAN

Were on the hills
High up I see green
re on the hills
- every thing from on hills
I can see a wonderful scene
I wont be able to name what I have seen
were on the hills

Name = Jupiter

I live 778 million km away from my world famous cousin, the sun. My neighbors are Mars and Saturn and I have 63 satellites, far too many to name. I am the largest planet in the solar system as my diameter is 139,516 km. A day here is 9hr, 51mins, so good luck on getting any sleep! I spin just 3 degrees away from upright. It would take 11.86 earth years to make up just one of mine. 9 different spacecraft have explored me, and I gave all the parts I could.

BETHANY

It was gigantic but it was terrifying. I have never seen anything like this before. It was really creepy. The moon started breaking and bits were flying at me. This noise started coming at me. Its a noise I had never heard before. The noise was like loud humming coming from all directions. More moon started breaking and suddenly one piece started flying straight towards me. I had to move. But it was to late.

BRENDAN

The wrapper feels like a foily crinkly foil.
The chocolate is hard and feels like a smooth.
The fondant gao is wet and thick and yummy.
DO: Bite into the top and enjoy both of the flavors.
DON'T: Eat all the chocolate then eat the fondant inside.
When you unwrap it sounds like a crinkle.
Bite into the creme egg and it sounds like a loud bite.
Sounds like your slurping a thick milkshake.

CREME EGG ROSIE

The stars were shining like dimonds
The rocket blast up to the cheesy moon
The stars were shining like dimonds
The lime green frogs were flying in space
The moon was going boom
The frogs went zoom
the stars were shining like dimonds

JOSH