Dear Parents, Carers and Children

The weather this week has meant that all classes have been able to get out and about mainly in the school grounds but Godrevy class have also been further afield. Afield being the operative word as they have been looking at agriculture in the surrounding area linked to their topic on Food and Food Production. With the absence of Mrs Sicolo, they didn't get to cook this week but they have found much to cook with, having found much windfall from the local farms' harvesting. They also finally got to see the combine harvester in action thanks to Mr and Mrs Pellow and many now have ambitions of driving one one day. Rinsey have also been looking at various types of machine linked to their Machine – Friend or Foe? topic and have been exploring how they work, learning some humorous explanations for how machines could work in their focus book 'Until I Met Dudley'. The highlight for many though was building their own trebuchet catapults and applying their scientific knowledge of fulcrums to see who could create the most powerful weapon. Kynance have not travelled outside of school but have based a lot of their learning in various areas of the school grounds and like Godrevy they have also been focussing on vegetables in particular the humble potato. However, this particular potato is far from humble and is actually Supertato a hero who is the protagonist in their story telling unit which was launched this week linked to their Super Hero theme for the term. Finally, Poldhu have also been exploring their own outdoor environment, again basing many of their areas of learning in the outdoors. I was particularly impressed with both their construction abilities and their physical co-ordination and balance when observing them create their obstacle/balance course. All in all, it has been an action filled week for all and most importantly the children seem to have fully settled into our new ways of working and throughout all my wanderings I have been met with many a smile and seldom seen a tear.

I am going to be shorter than usual this week as we have also ended the week with a busy recruitment day to find a replacement for Mrs Tullett who sadly will be leaving us next Thursday 24 September. I will leave it until next week to make an announcement as to who will be filling her shoes as we have to confirm details with candidates. However, I am delighted to say we had an outstanding field of applicants and we are delighted with the result. Thank you for your continued support.

Mr L Gardiner
